Knowledge: An interesting selection of methodology - particularly in this scenario where you don't have a customer in your scrum team. Good selection of requirements - but a missed opportunity around requirements sign-off. More discussion of why Scrumban was chosen would have been good. Pass

Application of Knowledge: No mention of the gherkin versions of the requirements - which I think is a missed opportunity; estimates seemed to have been missed - and there is certainly no mention of how they were calculated. Pass

Criticality: I think your sprints will be challenging (to say the least) due to poor estimating. Your discussion of FR vs NFR seems to be problematic. No mention of the product or any design - how long do you intend to keep the customer in the dark? Fail

Structure and Presentation: A well-written and structured report - no obvious errors indicating some proofreading as well. Merit
